45 G-MEN ON THE TRAIL

Block Off Peninsula, Only One

Beat the Brush

By Ralph B. Jordan
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 4.—(INS)—Peace officers, led by Governor Clarence D. Martin, today beat through the brush and woods of the mountainous Olympic peninsula for a man in a black overcoat who has become the No. 1 suspect in the sensational kidnapping of Charles Mattson, 10, son of a prominent Tacoma surgeon.

With the abduction mystery going into its second week, the small army of local, state and federal officers blocked all roads and ferry lines following the appearance of the man at a lumber mill and his command to the gateman to telephone Dr. William W. Mattson, father of the missing boy, that Charles was "all right."

E. R. Grubb, gateman for the Reed mill at Shelton, Wash., 50 miles west of Tacoma across Puget Sound, said a black coupe drove up last night and parked in a no parking zone.

"I left my shack," said Grubb, "to tell the driver he couldn't stay there. A man jumped out of the car and in a gruff, strong voice but in perfect English, said:

"Go to the mill, call Dr. Mattson in person over at Tacoma and deliver this message—Everything is well."

The man, according to Grubb, kept

Study Automotive Strike

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—While the Federal Government unofficially eyed developments that have thrown a $5,000,000,000 automobile industry out of gear, a new-born "Board of Strategy" of the United Auto Workers' Union today studied authority invested in it to call a general strike of General Motors' far-flung units.

Simultaneously in Flint, authorities awaited word from General Motors at sit-down strikers from two Fisher plants, which General Motors ordered out Saturday night by circuit court injunction.

Sheriff Thomas Wolcott, who was greeted with boos when he read the court order to the men Saturday, said he would make no attempt to clear the plant. General Motors attorneys some time today will decide what legal steps will be taken.

At least $9,000 pay checks amounting to an estimated $40,000 have been cut off as a result of strikes in five states.

QUARANTINE DECLARED
ON DOGS IN NEWTOWN

Result of Several Bitten by Stray Dog Few Weeks Ago;
One Dog Dies of Rabies

FOR PERIOD OF 90 DAYS

NEWTOWN, Jan. 4.—A quarantine has been declared on dogs in this borough.

The quarantine is the result of a case of rabies being determined when a dog owned by a local resident died after being sent to the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

This one dog, as well as several others, were bitten by a strange dog which passed through town a few weeks ago. Several dogs which were bitten were disposed of by their owners.

But in order to make certain the borough is purged of the menace, the quarantine was ordered for a 90-day period.

Citizens are asked to co-operate in this safety move that may save the life of some school child or adult.

Those refusing to co-operate will be subject to such restraint as provided under the dog laws of the State of Pennsylvania, which the Borough of Newtown will strictly enforce.

The quarantine notice reads as follows:

Because of certain dogs in Newtown Borough having been bitten by a dog presumably suffering with rabies, one of which has since died from that disease:

All owners of dogs in Newtown Borough are hereby instructed to keep the dogs securely tied or muzzled for a period of ninety days from December 25, 1936.

All persons are cautioned that all dogs seen running at large on the streets of Newtown Borough will be disposed of by the Borough Constable without notice to the dog owner.

WILLIAM S. TOMLINSON,
Chief Burgess.

Book "Charge of Light Brigade" for The Grand

The thundering hoofs that dashed across the pages of history to be immortalized by the unforgettable voice of Alfred Lord Tennyson—sound again through Warner Bros.' version of "The Charge of the Light Brigade," which comes to the Grand Theatre tonight and Tuesday with Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland in the featured roles.

Errol Flynn has the role of a young English Army officer stationed in India, who is betrothed to the daughter of his superior officer. During his absence, fighting on the frontier, however, his younger brother steals the love of his sweetheart and finally appraises him of the fact.

It is not until the eve of his departure to the Crimean War that his fiancée—a role played by Olivia de Havilland—tells him of her love for his brother—and her fear that the latter will be killed. His life wrecked, the young officer promises that his brother shall not be submitted to danger, and leaves for the Crimea, with only the thought of vengeance against Surat Khan—who has been responsible for the massacre of British men, women and children.

FIRST TO FILE APPLICATION FOR MARRIAGE LICENSE

Unlike Many Other Years
There Was No Rush To Be The First Couple

OBTAIN NO. 1 LICENSE

The honor of filing the first application for a marriage license in 1937 goes to a male resident of Bristol Township and a young woman of Bristol borough. Unlike many other years there was no rush to be the first couple to apply for a marriage license in Bucks county.

Gordon C. Gohler, 23, Bristol, R. D. 2, and Louise C. Marconi, 23, 404 Jefferson avenue, Bristol, had the distinction of being the first to file application in 1937.

The application was received Saturday by Miss Eleanor D. Worthington, of Hartsville, Clerk of Orphans' Court of Bucks County, from Justice of the Peace James Guy, of Bristol.

This No. 1 license cannot be used for three days under the law that went into operation in October, 1935.

It was not uncommon several years ago, under the old marriage license law for the Clerk of Orphans' Court and assistants to issue a number of licenses at midnight on the last day of the year.

Held in $500 Bail For Forging Name On Checks

Peter Choma, Jackson street, arrested January 1st on the charge of forging the name of Damon Johnson to a number of checks stolen from the office of the Johnson garage, Farragut avenue, Bristol, was given a hearing and held in $500 for court by Justice of Peace, James Guy.

Choma told Justice Guy that he must have been under the influence of liquor when he forged the Johnson name. Five of the 11 checks stolen have been accounted for, thus far. Each was drawn for $12.50.

Choma is reported as making all of the checks good which have thus far been presented for payment.

YOUNG SLAYER MEETS DEATH SO INDIFFERENTLY WELCOMED, IN ELECTRIC CHAIR; JACOB GABLE IS PRONOUNCED DEAD AT BELLEFONTE AT 12.35 A. M.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Jan. 4.—(INS)—Youthful Jacob Gable found the death he so indifferently welcomed in the electric chair at the Rockview Penitentiary early today when the trained hand of executioner Robert Elliott joined him into eternity for the slaying of his neighbor, aged Mrs. Harriet Goldstein, 79.

Gable was placed in the oaken death chair at 12:31 this morning. At 12:32 Elliott sent 2,000 volts and 12 amperes of electricity coursing through his body and at 12:35 he was pronounced dead by Dr. W. J. Weizel, the prison physician.

Gable, who killed Mrs. Goldstein because he feared she might tell police he was involved in a store robbery and then fled with a few of her trinkets as she lay dying on her blood-soaked kitchen floor, was calm, smiling and unperturbed as he walked the few short steps to meet his doom. He entered the brilliantly lit chamber of death unassisted.

As interested in the proceedings as the little group of impassive spectators, Gable glanced hurriedly around

FATAL ACCIDENT STARTS
OFF NEW YEAR IN COUNTY

Long Island Man Died When
Car Went Into a Skid
On the Highway

CAR WAS TELESKOPE

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 4.—One person was killed and another injured in Bucks county's first fatal automobile accident of 1937 on Saturday on the old Lincoln Highway, a quarter of a mile west of the Westover Inn.

The dead person is Phillip Daley, 24, of 165th street, Flushing, Long Island, driver of the car.

The injured person who was riding with Daley is John Corvan, 24, of 361 165th street, Flushing, Long Island. Corvan is in the St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, with a lacerated scalp, body bruises and shock, but his condition is not serious.

According to Corporal R. D. Evans and Patrolman Carfagno, of the South Langhorne, sub-station of State Highway Patrol, Daley and Corvan were driving west on the old Lincoln Highway when Daley lost control on a small curve. The coach in which they were riding started to skid on a soft shoulder. The car moved down a section of fence and crashed into a telephone pole.

"The car folded up like an accordion," Corporal Evans said. "The men were wedged fast in the wrecked car."

Dr. James Lawler, of Bristol, deputy Coroner of Bucks county, was summoned to the scene of the accident. He immediately issued a certificate of accidental death in Daley's case, due to a fractured skull, and ordered the body removed to a funeral home.

Install New Device To Assure Correct Weight

A new invention to guarantee correct weight to customers has just been installed by the Artesian Coal Company and visitors to the office have inspected this device with the keenest interest. It is called the Detecto-Gram. It certainly detects the slightest variation in the weight of the trucks as they drive upon the scales.

The Detecto-Gram was devised to make the weighing of coal an accurate science and to provide dealers with a device by which they can guarantee their customers correct weight, to the smallest fraction. It is just a small affair placed upon the scales, but it is so delicately adjusted that it makes the scales weigh to the smallest fraction of an ounce.

The customers of the Artesian Company are assured absolutely of correct weight by the employment of this new device, it is stated.

REPORT 8-CASE INCREASE IN RELIEF LOAD IN BUCKS

Week Ending December 26th
Shows Total of 362
Cases On Record

SUMMARY IS GIVEN

The relief load in Bucks County increased to 362 cases, including 1,392 persons, during the week ending December 26th, according to figures made available today.

During the week ending December 26, the caseload remained practically unchanged in Bucks County, as compared with the total number of cases carried at the end of the previous week. At the end of the week there were 362 cases consisting of 1,392 persons on the rolls, as compared with 354 cases or 1,358 persons carried at the end of the previous week. This represented a net weekly increase of only eight cases.

The summary tabulation of the cases which were approved for relief during the week (new and former relief cases), and the cases which were closed for relief, according to the reasons for opening or closing, is shown in the following table. It may be noted that the rather continuous increase in the caseload which has been experienced during the past few weeks, has been due almost entirely to the opening of cases due to the loss of employment in private industry.

Cases Closed	Week Ending Dec. 26, 1936	Dec. 26, 1936
1. Assignment to Works Projects	7	3
2. Employment in private industry	12	7
3. Other reasons (resources, increased earnings, etc.)	3	5
Total Closings	22	15

Cases Opened	Week Ending Dec. 26, 1936	Dec. 26, 1936
1. Loss of WPA employment	4	3
2. Loss of private employment	22	20
3. Other reasons (CCC, reduced earnings, exhaustion of resources, etc.)	4	5
Total Openings	30	23

The total number of applications received during the current week remained practically unchanged, amounting to 43 as compared with 42 applying to 43 as compared with 42 applying.

Highway Will Be Delayed
Unless Council Body Acts

HARRISBURG, Jan. 4.—A warning has been issued by Warren VanDyke, secretary of highways, that the needed improvement of Bethlehem Pike, from Sellersville north through Quakertown, will be delayed, unless the borough council at Sellersville acts quickly. The need, states VanDyke, is for that councilman body to establish lines and grades within the borough, and also to provide for restricted parking.

It is stated by the secretary of highways that the contract has been awarded for the entire section, with the stipulation the work is to be confined to this section in townships North of Sellersville unless the necessary steps are taken for proceeding with the work in that borough.

"If all the specified work is not completed, a dangerous connection will have to be used between the old and new locations of Bethlehem Pike, north of Sellersville," Secretary VanDyke said.

"While the county has assumed responsibility for property damage in the townships and Quakertown has ordained lines and grades, making that borough responsible for property damage, we cannot proceed until Sellersville acts."

"The U. S. Bureau of Public Roads has served notice it will not execute an agreement, making funds available for this work, until Sellersville takes the required steps."

"Either the borough or the County Commissioners may assume property damages in the borough, but the State is without authority to expend its funds thereafter."

YANKEE ENTERPRISE

Ted Peckham, enterprising young American abroad, is going to Paris to drive out the gigolos. Do not jump to the unwarranted conclusion that Mr. Peckham is a crusader or reformer or anything like that. Mr. Peckham is a business man. He runs escort agencies in New York and London. The difference between Mr. Peckham's paid escorts and the Paris gigolos is easily defined by saying that Mr. Peckham's young men are paid escorts while those Paris young men are gigolos.

Besides, the Paris gigolos are "sort of sinister," as Mr. Peckham puts it, and women are a little ashamed to be seen dancing with them. But they wouldn't be ashamed to be seen with "a refined young man, perhaps a Sorbonne graduate or a member of one of the old royalist families."

And that is the type of escort to be supplied by Mr. Peckham if and when he gets his Paris agency going. He is pretty good at finding that type of escort. He says he already has signed up "100 lords to act as paid escorts to lonely English ladies."

When asked, "Really lords?" Mr. Peckham replied: "Well,—they've got titles, anyway, and I've got another 30 honorables and such-like, including the younger sons of titled families. Of course, they haven't any handles—you know, titles,—but they are fine, refined fellows."

Mr. Peckham hopes to send "at least a couple of earls" from his London to his New York agency this winter; and he is glad that the British constitutional crisis is over and the coronation a sure thing.

During the coronation festivities, Mr. Peckham plans to boost his escort fee from two pounds or $10 to five pounds or $25 an evening.

Who says that a hustling young American business man can't make good abroad?

CLASSICAL MYSTERY

The Rev. Lancelot Ridley Phelps, classical scholar, is dead at Oxford at the age of 83. An M. A. and an honorary D.C.L., a provost of Oriel College from 1914 to 1929 and long a fellow and tutor thereof, Dr. Phelps was distinguished as classicist and academic administrator.

He was a member of the governing board of Charterhouse and Monmouth schools and apparently was diligent and versatile in the public service, having been a member of the royal commission on poor laws, chairman of the departmental committee on vagrancy, an alderman and a justice of the peace.

In Who's Who, Dr. Phelps listed his recreations as "walking, talking." But a press dispatch, reporting his death, says he was "known for his collection of spittoons." Here is a classical mystery which needs further elucidation.

If England had a Rose Bowl, it could have a post-season classic, if it had an opponent for Baldwin.

It isn't good for anybody to have no competition. Look at the only son of doting parents.

You'd think a continent like Europe, in which gas masks have become a popular Christmas gift, would get on to itself.

The suggestion that if America forgave seven-eighths of the debt, France might forget the rest was offered originally as a gag. But in France it's a policy.

ECHOES OF THE PAST
By Courier Staff Member
Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, July 1, 1875. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.
NEWPORTVILLE—William Berry had his hand, and Joseph Farrah his eye poisoned by handling potato bugs. They suffered very much, but are now convalescing. It is reported that two men—one in Tullytown and the other in Bustleton have died from the effects of potato bug poison; but I think it is doubtful.
At the intersection of the Newportville and Bristol road and Helltown road, Mr. J. C. Pennock, proprietor of the Keystone stock farm, has placed a finger board with directions to his place.
Four Bristol ladies had their pockets picked yesterday, while attending the funeral of the Rev. William Dalrymple at Fort Richmond. The sums taken varied in amount from $2 to $6. Mrs. J. Merrick Brown, Mrs. Martha Turner, Mrs. Elias Carr and Mrs. Miller were the victims. Mrs. Turner had with her two pocketbooks, one of which contained between $40 and $50, which fortunately remained in her possession.
The army worm, which has just made its appearance in this vicinity, devastates a field in an incredible short period of time. The heads of wheat, rye, and other grain are stripped as clean as kernels by these pests of the farmer, as though they had been threshed. The remedy to prevent the spread of the army worm is to thoroughly ditch around the field, making the sides of the ditches perpendicular.
On Wednesday morning of last week the barn of William C. Vanzant, of Morrisville, was destroyed by fire. One horse was so badly burned that it had to be afterwards killed. A threshing machine was also consumed. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The property was fully insured. Trenton firemen were soon on the ground, and prevented the flames from communicating to other buildings.
James Sands, living near Doylestown, was killed by lightning on Tuesday evening, while sitting at an open window. He was 52 years of age.
The Newtown Enterprise says that a young woman living with Josiah S. Worstall, in that borough, became sick last week by inhaling the fumes from a vessel of dead potato bugs, on which she had poured some hot water.
The new truck being constructed for the America Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, by Wilson Randall, is about completed. It is well and substantially made, presents a fine appearance, and is a credit to the superior workmanship of the builder.

On Wednesday evening, the 23rd, the annual commencement of Linden Seminary was held in Lenape Hall.

LOVE'S LITANY by Hazel Livingston

CHAPTER XXXVI
"Christie was a little over a year old then. She wasn't adopted. She was their girl. Dolph always figured her was married to Mimi. Mimi figured that way, too. The formality was just on account of the baby—to make everything right for her. . . . Not that things turned out that way."
Once more he reached for the suitcase.
"You can't prove that," McGlinn said. But his voice had lost its crisp assurance.
"Yes, I can prove it. Of Glass Eye Bertha used to be the baby's nursemaid—she got that name up at Circle City—knows the whole story. Runs a roomin' house in Seattle now. Old Lady Guinness is another one. Used to have an eatin' house in Dawson. She lives down San Diego now—raises a few nags at Tia Juana. She knows, too. That's two I could mention, offhand. There are others."
"Well, I guess I'll be goin'," he said, after a silence.
He felt more kindly towards them now. He was a little loath to go. It would be lonely up in the shack at Angels Camp.
But McGlinn said: "I'll call a cab for you. I suppose you'll want to get out of town tonight."
"Thankie," Elbert said. "Well, goodbye, Nettie. Goodbye, everybody."
Nettie didn't look up. Her hand had slumped forward on her breast. One of the girls was leaning over her, the other rubbing her hands.
So he went down the stairs alone. "Your taxi is here, sir," Herman said. "Goodbye, sir."
Elbert got into the waiting car. "Where to?" the driver asked.
Elbert looked at him. Where to, indeed?
After a moment he said: "Berkeley, 403 Throckmartin road."
Then he settled back comfortably. He had somewhere to go. The Lathams were just sitting down to dinner when Elbert Cooper got there.
"Don't be scared by my grip," he said. "I just stopped by on my way to the station."
"Just in time," Donald said, getting another chair for the old man. He didn't share Christie's enthusiasm for any friend of her father's, but the old boy looked ill and tired tonight, and besides, what else could you do?
"It's cornbeef hash, is that all right, Uncle Elbert?" Christie called from the kitchen.
"Sure, it's all right. What's better than cornbeef hash?"
Donald answered for him, for Uncle Elbert, as Christie called him, seemed rather dazed.
His good eye roamed around the pleasant, slightly shabby room. He looked at the big bowl of yellow roses on the library table, at the little grey cat with the two half-grown kittens playing in the corner by the window.
The screen door was open. From the garden came the fragrance of jasmine and freshly sprinkled earth. From the kitchen the aroma of coffee and browning biscuits.
Christie brought his plate.
"There you are, Uncle Elbert."
To his enormous disgust, Elbert Cooper was unable to answer. He covered his poor crossed eyes with his hands and wept.
After dinner Uncle Elbert was a new man.
He told the story all over again. But this time it was different. He forgot about being lonely and a failure and—well—not exactly a man of honor. As he told the story it seemed to him that he'd planned this all along.
"They made their offers," he said, "but I laid low. I held my horses. Did I say a word to you, Christie? No, sir, I kept quiet. I waited. Waited until the time was ripe. This afternoon Nettie showed her hand. Bein' a woman I wouldn't go into it with her. I made her send for McGlinn, the lawyer. Well sir, I laid down the law to him. I tell you, by the time I was through they was glad to see me go. Yes, sir, I saved the case for you."

He looked at Christie, basked in her tremulous, admiring smile. Here in the dusk of the June night, with only the flickering candles on the table for light, she looked like her mother. She might have been Mimi herself.
The same clear, thickly-lashed gray eyes. The same fair, soft hair, the same warm, flashing smile.
Long forgotten names came back to him. Long forgotten people and places.
They hung on his words. He got up and walked around the room, gesticulating, Christie laughed and cried. His good eye never left her face. He knew that she was living it over with him. He was excited.
But after he had told it all once, and had gone back to tell about Mollie the Moose, who ran her own dance hall at Nome, and acted as her own bouncer, too, and about a certain famous dog team that Dolph once owned, and a canoe trip that he, Elbert, once made from Sixty Mile river to White Horse, shooting Squaw Rapids on the way, Donald put a word in.
"What we should have done," he said, "is call a stenographer to take all this down, and have Nelson Pierce here to make it all legal."
Uncle Elbert yawned. "Wouldn't tomorrow do?"
So they put him to bed, on the living-room sofa, and long after his snores vibrated through the house, they lay awake, too tired, too excited to sleep.
They all went to Pierce's office in the morning. Even the baby. Christie wanted to leave him with Janet, but Elbert wouldn't hear of it. He carried him around most of the day in his arms.
"Before night they'll be around here, offering a settlement," Pierce said. "But if they don't, we can go ahead confident of success. Now that we've got this, Mrs. Latham, I can tell you frankly that I was pretty well scared. But now—it's as good as won!"
"In that case," Donald said, "I'll be getting on with my own business—which is not yet settled."
Of course Christie couldn't expect him to spend the whole day with her. He'd given last night, and most of today. But her eyes followed him wistfully as he disappeared down the corridor. After all—this was her day of days—he might have stayed—
"Well, we may as well start home," she told Uncle Elbert.
He hoisted young Donny on his shoulder.
Home. He knew it wasn't his home, but he might stay for a few days more, until Pierce was through with him. It would be something to think about after he got back to the cabin. He might even do some prospecting, late as it was. Looked like this was his lucky year.
The telephone was ringing as they came in the door.
Christie dropped her paper bags, and ran to answer it. Grapefruit rolled out of one bag, and carrots out of another, but Uncle Elbert made a game for Donny, picking them up. Christie's face glowed as she listened to Pierce on the other end of the wire.
"Of course I'll settle—but of course I want to talk it over with Donald first. Heavens, do you really think I could get seventy-five thousand? What would I do with it?"
"What did I tell you?" Elbert demanded. "But don't you take less'n a hundred thousand. You can get it—easy as rollin' off a log!"
He scolded her, because she didn't call Pierce back and tell him to demand the hundred thousand.
"I'm tellin' you, you can get it!" But she was too happy, too excited really to listen. She wandered around the house, thinking of the things she'd buy for it. Some good oriental rugs for the living room. A wing chair. That set of dishes she'd wanted for a year. Why they could even build on the two extra rooms they'd dreamed about. A real

FOUGHT FOR CASH REGISTER IN WAR
PARIS—(INS)—Talk of the retirement of Juliette Demaret, France's oldest postmistress, has reminded the villagers of Chamuzay of how she bravely defended her cash register against the Germans during the war. Mlle. Demaret, now 81, stood up and defended her cash register when the Germans entered her shop before the Battle of the Marne.
"They came with big axes over their shoulders to break it open," she relates. "There was nothing in it. We had cleared it the evening before. But I wouldn't have the drawer smashed. So I defended it. And they wanted to dismantle my telephone, the brigands! But finally they left it alone."

Search Olympic Peninsula For Kidnap Suspect

his hands in his pockets in such a way as to convince the watchman he carried a gun. As he finished speaking he jumped back into the car and it sped away so quickly that Grubb said he felt certain some one else was driving, although he couldn't see who was behind the wheel.

The tail light of the car was out and Grubb was unable to catch a glimpse of the license plate.

The watchman described his rough-talking visitor as dark, about 40 years of age, weight about 150, height 5 feet 9 inches, with sharp eyes and a "long, flat nose with wide nostrils."

That picture tallies closely with the one of the kidnaper as he was seen fleeing with the Mattson boy a week ago last night—the verbal picture of the boy's older brother and sister and a friend from whom he was torn in the hilltop Mattson home on the shores of Puget Sound on the outskirts of Tacoma.

The watchman, instead of calling Dr. Mattson, telephoned Sheriff Gerald Byrne at Shelton. The sheriff notified authorities at Olympia, the State capital, 18 miles away, and they in turn flashed the news to the State Highway Patrol and the 45 G-men gathered at Tacoma.

The entire forces of the law turned out quickly and blocked off the peninsula, which lies between the Pacific Ocean and Puget Sound.

There was one possibility of escape, however—the 18-mile road from Shelton to Olympia which the suspect might have driven a few minutes before the blockade was established.

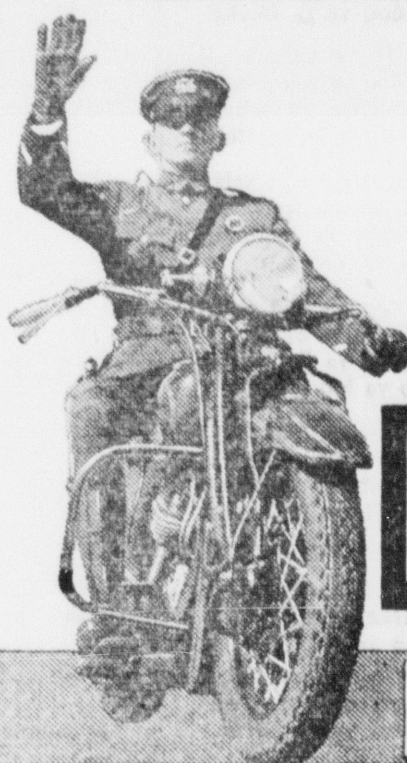

To Forest Lake and raided the house, only to find two reputable friends of Forbes and no children occupying the premises.

Another report an abandoned car had been found near Isabella, 20 miles from Shelton, sent state highway patrolmen scurrying there in the hope the machine was the one driven by the black overcoated visitor at the Shelton lumber mill. They discovered, however, the car belongs to a citizen who had only parked it for a time and that he was not the man wanted.

From Tacoma, a score of government cars, which have been kept running in garages, roared away with G-men and raced to Mason county where the kidnap specialists took active charge of the man-hunt.

Harold Nathan, assistant director of the G-men and in charge of the Mattson case, answered all questions with his usual "no comment," but it was evident for certain reasons the federal sleuths do not at this time believe the overcoated individual is the kidnaper, although why they take this attitude could not be ascertained.

The missing boy's father said simply: "I can only hope this man's words were true—that my boy is all right," a sentiment echoed tearfully by Charles mother.

MORRISVILLE HIGH PASSERS ARE TOPS

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 4—As in the past two seasons, the basketball record, under Coach John Hoffman, at Morrisville High School, again took honors for the past year. The Bulldogs copped the Lower Bucks County League title, went on to win the Bucks County tournament and then to the finals of the District No. 1 division in the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Tourney.

Captained by Craig White and composed of Dick Young, Frank Wilmet, Frank Aiello, Bob Anderson, Johnny Harrison, Bucky Wallace, Johnny Zaek, Joe Adams and Harry Hughes, the Blue and Gold won 22 and lost four.

The football team captured only three games, lost five and tied two. Featuring the card was the 7 to 0 contest with Bristol High, again won by the Bunnies but only after a stiff fight.

White won the high school singles tennis crown, beating Elmer McClune. The tennis team won three and lost two matches for the season.

The track team had a fair season, winning two meets and losing the other two. The freshman relay four, composed of Edwin Cook, Al Johnson, Art Baehr and Bill Wilson started throughout the year, finishing second in the tough Bucks County meet competition at Perkasio.

MILL ST. BOYS' FIVE PLAYS IN PHIL. A. TONIGHT

Mill St. Boys' Club basketball team is ready to secure its first victory from the strong playing of the Benezet Boys' Club, in Philadelphia, tonight. This club is now leading the Crime Prevention League, and the Mill Street Boys' Club will have to be in first-class playing condition to stop the Benezet quintet. Under leadership of coach Samuel Schiffer the Mill street five will be in tip-top shape, it is claimed.

Spike Naylor seems to have full possession of the tap; and the forward posts will be held down by that high-scoring ace Joe Wooley and his running mate, Sam Schiffer. The guards will be "Chick" Clarella and "Flash" LaPolla.

Transportation will be greatly appreciated tonight from the club house to Philadelphia. Anyone who can furnish transportation is asked to get in touch with managers Tony Orazi or Pete Cattani.

Pool Tournament Attracts Large Crowds

Large crowds are being attracted to St. Ann's club-house every Monday and Thursday nights when the games of the Bristol Pool Tournament are played. As the tourney grows closer more fans jam the Wood street club-house. Tonight the fifth game of the series of contests will be played, with Charles Oriola meeting Philip Quici in a 125-point game.

Winners in the games thus far have been Eugene Squillace, Philip LaSalle, Joseph Bornice and Harry Kendig.

Game tonight will begin at eight o'clock, sharp.

theless heard his case. When the Pardon Board refused to intervene, he had told his jailers, it was to him a "favor" because he wanted to die.

Father McCreesh left the death chamber hurriedly after the execution but returned later to administer the final rites. Gable spent Sunday in the same calm manner that marked his long wait for death in the Cambria County Jail. He ate the regular prison fare, wrote three farewell letters, the recipients of which were kept secret and made only one complaint, that because the death row guards refused to break their rules and speak with him. His body was claimed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Gable, natives of Austria who reside in Johnstown.

Gable arrived at the Penitentiary Saturday morning after a ride in biting cold weather over treacherous icy highways. All through the trip, he maintained a cheerful behavior.
